The Sanstha

Late Shri. Janardan Bhagat Saheb always believed that a person can achieve anything with the help of education. He dreamed of spreading the light of education to the doors of common man. Late Shri. Janardan A. Bhagat Saheb worked tirelessly for poor and spent his whole life for the development of this area. He always tried to make available the educational facilities to the students. His dedicated and hardworking life became the source of inspiration to our Hon. Chairman Shri. Ramsheth Thakur Saheb to establish the Sanstha. In order to fulfill his dream the Janardan Bhagat Shikshan Prasarak Sanstha was formed on 1/1/1992 and named as such. During 25 years of journey the Sanstha has spread its wing in various fields of education. Today this Sanstha has 18 educational institutes under its wings.

The emblem that Janardan Bhagat Shikshan Prasarak Sanstha has adopted officially is carefully designed and beautifully carved signifying the ideology and educational philosophy of the Sanstha. The emblem reflects the vision, the mission as well as the goals and objectives set by the sanstha. At the center of the emblem, the rising sun symbolizes our commitment to the all pervasive spread of education steering through the hazy darkness of ignorance and illiteracy. Below that the open book having alphabets 'J' in English and 'ज' in Devnagari script indicate the educational philosophy of the Sanstha imparting the quality education consisting of knowledge, skills and thirst for excellence. Around the circle the name of the sanstha is adroitly drawn. Around the beautiful letters there are two circles, the inner one suggesting the dynamism, persistence in development and pursuit of excellence whereas the other one suggests the balance, decorum and broad perspective.

About Faculty Development Program

The main idea behind Faculty Development Programmes (FDPs) across the world is "upskill". The curricula of various programmes at many universities are updated to keep pace with the changing demands of the industry. While younger faculty who have graduated recently may be better skilled, the experienced ones are the backbone of the teaching-learning environment and academic administration at the university level. Hence, it becomes imperative to provide them with opportunities to upgrade their overall skills so as to meet the current expectations. With the world coming closer especially during the pandemic and governments allowing cross-border collaborations, students need newer and global ways of exploration and growth. Each member of the faculty must become a learner before he/she becomes a teacher. It is a two-way process. To maximise the ability of faculty to teach and students to learn and to nurture a productive culture, faculty development should lie at the heart of any higher education institution.

The fundamental requirement of teaching learning process is to have vector approach towards developing new methods and models of imparting education particularly at graduation and post-graduation level. The new National Education Policy framework has provided the beacon focusing on the versatile vision of bringing various professionals and traditional educational curriculum under single umbrella. This has been the vision of taking the new challenges and providing practical feasible solution to the ever changing needs and requirements of the industry and market oriented system of development. Here, multidisciplinary approach is the need of the hour. The vision under the National Education Policy is to develop new modules and educational programmes providing more opportunities for the students not only at National but also at International level. This National Faculty Development Programme allows the participants from different professional backgrounds to come on a common platform made available to understand the recent trends and challenges in the changing world of education, research and employment. The faculties should be ready and equipped to undertake the herculean task to fulfil the needs and requirements of industry and market at its best.
